LITERATURE IN ENGLISH

028

28/07/2023 8.30 AM -11.30 AM

NESA NATIONAL EXAMINATION AND SCHOOL INSPECTION AUTHORITY

ADVANCED LEVEL NATIONAL EXAMINATIONS, 2022-2023

SUBJECT: LITERATURE IN ENGLISH

COMBINATIONS:

- HISTORY-ECONOMICS-LITERATURE IN ENGLISH (HEL)
- LITERATURE IN ENGLISH -ECONOMICS-GEOGRAPPHY (LEG)
- HISTORY-GEOGRAPHY-LITERATURE IN ENGLISH (HGL)
- LITERATURE IN ENGLISH-FRENCH-KINYARWANDA (LFK)
- LITERATURE IN ENGLISH -KISWAHILI-KINYARWANDA (LKK)
- LITERATURE IN ENGLISH -KISWAHILI- FRENCH (LKF)

DURATION: 3 HOURS

INSTRUCTIONS

1) Do not open this paper until you are told to do so.
2) Write your names and index number on your answer booklet as they appear on your registration form and DO NOT write your names and index number on additional answer sheets if provided.
3) This paper consists of THREE Sections: A, B and C.
   Section A: Prose and Poetry (35 marks)
   Section B: Plays (35 marks)
   Section C: Novels (30 marks)
4) Use only a blue or black pen.

SECTION A: Prose and Poetry (35 marks)

1) Attempt the following questions on key terms related to prose. (5 marks)

a) What do you understand by the term "motif" in Literature? (1 mark)
b) Differentiate static character from dynamic character. (1 mark)
c) What do you understand by the term suspense? (1 mark)
d) Identify two types of plot. (1 mark)
e) Compare flashback with foreshadowing. (1 mark)

2) Attempt the following questions on key terms related to poetry. (5 marks)

a) Name any two characteristics of an epic. (1 mark)
b) What do you understand by the term free verse? (1 mark)
c) Compare a haiku with a tanka. (1 mark)
d) What do you understand by the term ode? (1 mark)
e) How is an elegy different from an epitaph? (1 mark)

3) Read the passage below and answer the questions that follow. (15 marks)

"Khadija Bent Ahmed! Meeluda Bent Al-bacheer!" At this resounding call, two old women in the waiting room gathered up the voluminous folds of their veils with their designs of blooming red roses. They rushed to the courtroom and stood in front of the judge. He was turning over some papers on his desk.

"Khadija Bent Ahmed!"

"Yes, sir!"

"Did you leave your house of your own free will?"

"I didn't, sir! This Meeluda told me I could come back. She swore by Mecca that I could come back as soon as her ceiling was repaired. Her ceiling is the floor of my house, Sir. So I left everything there. I only took my clothes, because she said the repairs would just take a month. But she broke the landing and demolished the stairs. Now, my two rooms are like they are suspended in the air. I can't get to them, Sir. It has been two years. And because my rooms are suspended, I go to my brother's for a while and then to my sister's. It's just two rooms, true, but it's my little home."

She burst into tears, wiped her eyes with the hem of her veil, and began to sob like a child. "I entered that house as a bride," She went on, "and I intended to stay there till the end of my days. Haven't we paid for it? Yes, we have, more than its worth, in the thirty years we have been living there."

"Big deal," snorted the defendant. "Forty dirhams a month.

What's that? It wouldn't by even a kilogram of meat."

"Stop it!" shouted Khadija. "What about the blood? Your blood from childbirth that I cleaned with my own hands? What about the meals I cooked for your feasts and your mourning ceremonies? What about your children, who grew up on my back? It's thirty years, six hundred and sixty monthly rents, two million centimes, perhaps more.

Couldn't that amount have bought us your house and mine? Couldn't it? If it weren't for my late husband's carelessness and extravagance. They call it generosity! He wasted his money feeding his ungrateful, so –called friends. Meat was brought to our house seven kilos at a time. If he…"

"Forget your late husband now, will you?" Ordered the judge. Was it your husband who told you to lock the house and give the key to the defendant?"

"I didn't give her the key, Sir. The key is still with me." She raised her skirts, bent over, and pulled from the pocket of her bloomers a big black key. "There! But what good is it? The house has no stairs and no landing. It's suspended in the air."

"You mean you just locked the door and walked away?"

"Well, she's my neighbour and she swore by Mecca. Wouldn't a good Muslim lock the door and walk away? I believed her."

"What do you want now?"

"My home!" Tears overwhelmed her again and she murmured as if to herself: "I can't stop crying when I pronounce that word." And to the judge: "I am frightened of moving, very anxious, as if I was being expatriated or was dying. It's my little, Sir." She started to cry again.

"Where have you been all this time? Why haven't you submitted your case to the court before?"

"I had it in the hands of saints, Sir."

"And you took it back, I guess," said the judge, smiling. The audience smiled, too. Then he asked the defendant: "What's your statement?"

"Two years ago, bless you, sir, dirt started coming down from my ceiling. So, I asked this person to evacuate her house above it, so we could repair the ceiling. But when the worker touched it, the landing collapsed, and carried the staircase with it. Were it not for God's grace, the poor man could have lost his life. That's the whole story."

"What are you saying?" cried Khadija. "You swore by Mecca, Meeluda! You said you'd do the repairs and I could come back!"

"Stop wailing! There's no way to fix it. The whole house is collapsing, for heaven's sake!"

"Enough!" ordered the judge, then pronounced the following sentence: Tomorrow morning, if God wills it, at ten sharp, local firemen will bring Khadija Bent Ahmed's belongings from the house located in number 3 Baker Street. She will take her possessions, in the presence of the police, and return the key to its proprietor. Case closed. Next."

(From "Two Stories of a House" by Leila Abouzeid (Morocco)

Questions

a) Where do events of Khadija Bent Ahmed's story occur? (1 mark)
b) How was Khadija tricked by Meeluda? (1 mark)
c) How long has it been since Khadija lost her house? (1 mark)
d) Describe any character trait of Khadija's late husband. (1 mark)
e) What is the judge's verdict? Is it fair? Support your answer. (3 marks)
f) In the next part of this story, Khadija says "There is no good neighbour in this world, no grateful people, no faithful husbands."? Do you agree with Khadija? Support your answer. (3 marks)
g) Discuss two themes portrayed in the passage. (2 marks)
h) Analyse two literary devices used in the passage. (2 marks)
i) What do you learn from the passage? (1 mark)

4) Read the poem below and answer the questions that follow. (10 marks)

Educational Dispersion

The instructor is, at head of class,
Scans the classroom and sees all the students,
They inhabit the room like inert gas,
Atoms of reason float in abundance.

Who will learn and who will remain inert?
The instructor may not ask of such things,
It is enough to keep a group alert,
And help them all to grow their wings.

Many moments are spent in discussions,
Helping fresh minds understand the subject,
Sometimes there are excursions,
And sometimes seeing the real object.

Though some may let their knowledge fade,
Many will find work and careers will be made.

By Graphite Drug

Questions

a) What is the poem talking about? (1 mark)
b) Count the number of syllables in verse three of the second stanza. (1 mark)
c) Discuss two poetic devices used in this poem. (2 marks)
d) Outline any two poetic devices that can be used to create rhythm in a poem. (2 marks)
e) What kind of poem is this? Give reasons for your answer. (2 marks)
f) Is the rhyme in this poem feminine or masculine? Support your answer. (2 marks)

SECTION B: Plays (35 marks)

5) Answer these questions on key terms related to drama. (5 marks)

a) Name any two types of drama. (1 mark)
b) Identify two features of play/drama which make it different from other genres of literature. (1 mark)
c) Distinguish the two types of plot in drama. (1 mark)
d) In a play, there is a character who fights against the hero. Who is that? (1 mark)
e) What do you understand by the term didactic drama? (1 mark)

6) Choose ONE of the two passages below, read it carefully and then answer the questions that follow as concisely as possible. (15 marks)

Either: (A) BERTOLT BRECHT :The Caucasian Chalk Circle

OLD MAN: Milk? We have no milk. The soldiers from the city have our goats. Go to the soldiers if you want milk.

GRUSHA: But grandfather, you must have a little pitcher of milk for a baby?

OLD MAN: And for a God- bless - you, eh?

GRUSHA: Who said anything about God -bless- you? (She shows her pursue.) We'll pay like princes." Head in the clouds, backside in the water." (The peasant goes off, grumbling for milk) How much for the milk?

OLD MAN: Three piasters. Milk has gone up.

GRUSHA: Three piasters for the little drop? (Without a word the Old Man shuts the door in her face) Michael, did you hear that? Three piasters! We can't afford it! (She goes back sits down again, and gives the CHILD her breast), Suck. Think of the three piasters. There's nothing there, but you think you're drinking and that's something. (Shaking her head, she sees that the CHILD isn't sucking she gets up, walks back to the door, knocks again.) Open, grandfather, we 'll pay. (softly.) May lightning strikes you! (When the Old Man appears) I thought it would be half a piaster. But the baby must be fed. How about one piaster for that little drop?

OLD MAN: Two.

GRUSHA: Don't shut the door again. (She fishes a long time in her bag.) Here are two piasters. The milk better be good. I still have two day's journey ahead of me. It is a murderous business you have here- and sinful, too!

OLD MAN: Kill the soldiers if you want milk.

GRUSHA: (giving the child some milk): This is an expensive joke. Take a sip, Michael, it's a week 's pay. Around here they think we earned our money just sitting on our behinds, Oh, Michael, you are a nice little load for a girl to take on! (Uneasy, she gets up, puts the child on her back, and walks on. The OLD MAN, grumbling, picks up the pitcher and looks after her unmoved.)

SINGER: As Grusha Vashnadze went northward The Princess's Iron shirts went after her.

Chorus: How will the barefoot girl escape the iron shirts, The blood hounds, the trap-setters?

They hunt even by night. Pursuers never tire. Butchers sleep little.

Two IRON SHIRTS are trudging along the highway.

CORPORAL: You will never amount to anything, blockheaded, your heart is not in it. Your senior officer sees this in little things. Yesterday, when I met the fat girl, yes, you grabbed her husband as I commanded, and you did kick him in the belly, at my request, but did you enjoy it, like a loyal Private, or were you just doing your duty? I've kept an eye on your blockhead, you're a hollow reed and a tinkling cymbal, you won't get promoted. (They walk a while in silence.) Don't think I've forgotten how insubordinates you are, either. Stop limping! I forbid you to limp! You limp because I sold the horses, and I sold the houses because I'd never have got that price again. You limp to show me you don't like marching. I know you. It won't help. You wait. Sing!

Questions

a) Explain what happens just before this extract. (2 marks)
b) " And for a God- bless - you, eh?" What does the old man mean by this? (1 mark)
c) What signs exist in this extract that show that times are hard as a result of the revolt? (2 marks)
d) Discuss two themes depicted in this extract. (2 marks)
e) Identify and illustrate two character traits of Grusha brought out in this extract. (2 marks)
f) Identify any two figures of speech used to portray the message in this extract. (2 marks)
g) With four events from the rest of the play, show how Grusha sacrificed her life for Michael. (4 marks)

Or :(B) HENRIK IBSEN: An Enemy of the People

DR. STOCKMANN: It is I who have the real good of the town at heart! I want to lay bare the defects that sooner or later must come to the light of day. You'll see whether I love my own town!

PETER STOCKMANN: You, who in your blind obstinacy want to cut off the most important source of the town's revenue?

DR. STOCKMANN: The source is poisoned, man! Are you mad? We are making our living by retailing and corruption! The whole of our flourishing municipal life derives its sustenance from a lie!

PETER STOCKMANN: Nonsense—or something even worse. The man who can make such vile suggestions about his own town must be an enemy to our community.

DR. STOCKMANN: (going up to him). Do you dare to—!

MRS. STOCKMANN: (throwing herself between them). Thomas!

PETRA: (catching her father by the arm). Don't lose your temper, father!

PETER STOCKMANN: I will not expose myself to violence. Now you have had a warning; think of what you owe to yourself and your family. Goodbye. (Goes out.)

DR. STOCKMANN: (walking up and down): Am I to put up with such treatment as this? In my own house, Katherine! What do you think!

MRS. STOCKMANN: Indeed, it is both shameful and absurd, Thomas—

PETRA: If only I could lay my hands on that uncle of mine…

DR. STOCKMANN: It is my own fault. I ought to have flown out at him long ago! —shown my teeth! —bitten! To hear him call me an enemy to our community! Me! By God, I shall not take that lying down.

MRS. STOCKMANN: But, dear Thomas, your brother has power on his side.

DR. STOCKMANN: Yes, but I have right on mine, I tell you.

MRS. STOCKMANN: Oh yes, right—right. What is the use of having right on your side if you have not got might?

PETRA: Oh, mother! —how can you say such a thing!

DR. STOCKMANN: Do you imagine that in a free country it is no use having right on your side? You are being stupid, Katherine. Besides, haven't I got the free, independent press to lead the way, and the compact majority behind me? That is might enough, I should think!

MRS. STOCKMANN: But, good heavens, Thomas, you don't mean to?

DR. STOCKMANN: Don't mean to what?

MRS. STOCKMANN: To set yourself up against your brother.

DR. STOCKMANN: In God's name, what else do you expect me to do but take my stand on right and truth?

PETRA: Yes, I was just about to say that.

MRS. STOCKMANN: But it won't do you any scrap of good. If they won't do it, they won't.

DR. STOCKMANN: Oho, Katherine! Just give me time, and you will see how I will take the war to them.

MRS. STOCKMANN: Yes, you carry the war to them, and get fired-that is what you will get.

DR. STOCKMANN: In any case I shall have done my duty towards the public—towards society. A public enemy indeed!

MRS. STOCKMANN: But what about your family, Thomas? Your own home! Do you think that is doing your duty towards those you have to provide for?

PETRA: Ah, don't think always about us, mother.

MRS. STOCKMANN: Oh, it is easy for you to talk; you are able to fend for yourself, if need be. But remember the boys, Thomas; and think a little of yourself too, and of me…

DR. STOCKMANN: I think you are out of your senses, Katherine! If I were to be such a miserable coward as to go on my knees to Peter and his damned crew, do you think I would ever have an hour's peace of mind all my life afterwards?

MRS. STOCKMANN: I don't know anything about that; but God preserve us from the peace of mind we shall have, all the same, if you go on defying him! You will find yourself again without a job, with no income to count upon. I think we had enough of that in the old days. Remember that, Thomas; think what it will lead to.

Questions

a) Explain what happens just before this extract. (2 marks)
b) Why is Katherine worried? (1 mark)
c) Mention the two diseases that are caused by the 'defects' Dr. Stockmann is talking about (1 mark)
d) Discuss one style used to convey the message of this extract. (1 mark)
e) Identify the theme portrayed in this extract. (1 mark)
f) What does Peter Stockmann accuse Dr. Stockmann of? (2 marks)
g) Identify and illustrate any two character traits of Dr. Stockmann and Katherine brought out in this extract. (4 marks)
h) How was Dr. Stockmann and his family affected throughout the play as a result of disobeying his brother (Peter Stockmann)? (3 marks)

7) Choose ONE play and answer the question on it. (15 marks)

Either:(A) ARTHUR MILLER: The Crucible

The characters in The Crucible are driven by self-interest rather than concern for others.

Support your answer with examples from the play.

Or: (B)WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE: Julius Caesar

Discuss the following themes in the play "Julius Caesar."

a) Power of speech
b) Omens
c) Betrayal

SECTION C: Novels (30 marks)

8) Choose ONE of the two passages below; read it carefully and then answer the questions that follow as concisely as possible. (15 marks)

Either: (A) PETER ABRAHAMS: Mine Boy

Around them, the street was alive. People moved up and down. Children played in the gutters, and picked up dirty orange peels and ate them. The pulsating motion of Malay Camp at night was everywhere. Warm and intense and throbbing.

People sang.

People cried.

People fought.

People loved.

People hated.

Others were sad.

Others gay.

Others with friends.

Others lonely.

Some died.

Some were born…

"You say you don't know. I know, Xuma, I know."

She looked at him and there was the shadow of a smile on her lips, but her eyes were serious. "I know," she whispered. Then she pulled herself together and her voice changed:

"Listen to me Xuma. I will try again to make you understand. In the city it is like this: all the time you are fighting. Fighting. Fighting! When you are asleep and when you are awake. And you look only after yourself. If you do not, you are finished. If you are soft, everyone will spit in your face. They will rob you and cheat you and betray you. So, to live here, you must be hard. Hard as a stone. And money is your best friend. With money, you can buy a policeman. With money, you buy somebody to go to jail for you. That is how it is, Xuma. It may be good, it may be bad, but there it is. And to live, one must see it. Where you come from, it isn't so. But here, it is so."

Again, there was a long silence between them. The stars came out and twinkled brightly in the sky. The moon came up, and chasing the Milky Way, travelled eastward.

Rosita, who lived across the way, turned on her gramophone and came on her veranda swaying her broad hips.

"Hello!" she called across to Leah.

Leah looked up, startled. Xuma too, was startled.

"We must go in," Leah said. "Food will be ready."

"My white man gave me a pound," Xuma said. "Will you take some of it for my food and my sleeping here?"

Leah got up. She stared down at him then turned away.

"No. You can pay me when you get paid properly," she said gruffly. "Come."

They went in.

A fire, made in a paraffin tin with holes in the side, stood in the centre of the kitchen. And around it, of the floor, sat Ma Plank, Daddy, a man who was a stranger to Xuma, the pale fat one called Drunk Liz, Lena the thin coloured woman, Johannes, and another woman who was also a stranger.

Questions

a) Where is this extract set? (1 mark)
b) Why is Xuma worried according to this extract? (1 mark)
c) What piece of advice did Leah give to Xuma? (1 mark)
d) Describe Xuma's character traits in this novel. (2 marks)
e) Discuss any two literary devices used to portray the message in this extract. (2 marks)
f) From the above extract, describe the life in Malay Camp. (2 marks)
g) Explain how the theme of corruption and kindness are portrayed in this extract with relevant examples. (4 marks)
h) What happens to Leah later in the novel? (2 marks)

Or: (B) CHINUA ACHEBE: A Man of the People

Nanga must have gone into politics soon afterwards and then won a seat in Parliament. (It was easy in those days- before we knew its cash price.) I used to read about him in the papers some years later and even took something like pride in him. At that time, I had just entered the University and was very active in the Students' branch of the People's Organization Party. Then in 1960 something disgraceful happened in the Party and I was completely disillusioned.

At that time Mr. Nanga was an unknown back-bencher in the governing P.O.P. A general election was imminent. The P.O.P. was riding high in the country and there was no fear of its not being returned. Its opponent, the Progressive Alliance Party, was weak and disorganized.

Then came the slump in the international coffee market. Overnight (or so it seemed to us) the Government had a dangerous financial crisis on its hands. Coffee was the prop of our economy just as coffee farmers the bulwark of the P.O.P.

The Minister of Finance at the time was a first-rate economist with a Ph.D. in public finance. He presented to the Cabinet a complete plan for dealing with the situation.

The Prime Minister said 'No' to the plan. He was not going to risk losing the election by cutting down the price paid to coffee planters at that critical moment; the National Bank should be instructed to print fifteen million pounds. Two-thirds of the Cabinet support the Minister. The next morning the Prime Minister sacked them and in the evening he broadcast to the nation. He said the dismissed ministers were conspirators and traitors who had teamed up with foreign saboteurs to destroy the new nation.
I remember this broadcast very well. Of course, no one knew the truth at that time. The newspapers and the radio carried the Prime Minister's version of the story. We were very indignant. Our Students' Union met in an emergency session and passed a vote of confidence in the leader and called for a detention law to deal with the miscreants. The whole country was behind the leader. Protest marches and demonstrations were staged up and down the land.

It was at this point that I first noticed a new, dangerous and sinister note in the universal outcry.

The Daily Chronicle, an official organ of the P.O.P., had pointed out in an editorial that the Miscreant Gang, as the dismissed ministers were now called, were all university people and highly educated professional men. (I have preserved a cutting of that editorial.)

Let us now and for all time extract from our body-politic as a dentist extracts a stinking tooth all those decadent stooges versed in text-book economics and aping the white man's mannerisms and way of speaking. We are proud to be Africans. Our true leaders are not those intoxicated with their Oxford, Cambridge or Harvard degrees but those who speak the language of the people. Away with the damnable and expensive university education which only alienates an African from his rich and ancient culture and puts him above his people…

This cry was taken up on all sides. Other newspapers pointed out that even in Britain where the Miscreant Gang got its 'so called education' a man need to be an economist to be Chancellor of the Exchequer or a doctor to be Minister of Health. What mattered was loyalty to the party.

I was in the public gallery the day the Prime Minister received his overwhelming vote of confidence. And that was the day the truth finally came out; only no one was listening. I remember the grief-stricken figure of the dismissed Minister of Finance as he held his team into the chamber and was loudly booed by the members and the public. That week his car had been destroyed by angry mobs and his house stoned. Another dismissed minister had been pulled out of his car, beaten insensible, and dragged along the road for fifty yards, then tied hand and foot, gagged and left by the roadside. He was still in the orthopaedic hospital when the house met.

That was my first – and last – visit to Parliament. It was also the only time I had set eyes on Mr Nanga again since he taught me in 1948.

Questions

a) Describe the setting of this extract? (1 mark)
b) Who is the narrator in this extract? (1 mark)
c) Give the reason behind the dismissal of Minister of Finance and his supporters. (1 mark)
d) Comment on the point of view used in this extract. (1 mark)
e) Describe the character traits of The Prime Minister in this extract. (2 marks)
f) Discuss any three literary techniques used to portray the message in this extract. (3 marks)
g) Discuss any theme that is used to portray the message in this extract. (2 marks)
h) With evidence from the extract, examine the impact of Western education to African leadership. (2 marks)
i) Comment on this statement from A Man of the People, by Chinua Achebe:
"Our true leaders are not those intoxicated with their Oxford, Cambridge and Harvard degrees but those who speak the language of the people." (2 marks)

Question 9: Choose ONE novel and answer the question on it. (15 marks)

Either: (A)GEORGE ORWELL: Animal Farm

With specific examples from 'Animal Farm', prove that Napoleon exercised dictatorship throughout the novel to maintain his power.

Or: (B) JOHN STEINBECK: The Pearl

Desire without limits can destroy us and our family members.
Using illustrations from The Pearl, write an essay in support of this statement.

-END-